Dear Business and Marketing Educator:

Do you want to have your voice heard about your experiences as a New York State business and marketing educator? If so, I need your help.

My name is Michael LaMastra and I am a PhD student at the University Albany's Department of Educational Policy and Leadership. I received your name and contact information from the New York State Education Department identifying you as a Business and Marketing teacher in New York State. Many of you may know me from my professional work with the New York State Education Department as the Associate in Business and Marketing Education, but I am writing to you today in my capacity as a University at Albany student.

For my dissertation, I am conducting a study on job satisfaction of New York's Business and Marketing educators. This study will provide insight as to the current job satisfaction of New York's Business and Marketing Educators as well as implications for teacher recruitment and retention.

What I need from you: Participate in an anonymous survey. The time to complete the survey will vary by individual, but it is anticipated that this survey will take no more than 10 minutes to complete.

Upon completion of a second brief questionnaire (that uncouples your survey response) I will ask for your name and e-mail so that I can send you a copy of the results of the study and enter you in a raffle for a chance to win one of 12 $25 Amazon gift cards.

I sincerely hope you will take the time to participate in this research and help inform leaders and policymakers about your experiences as a business and marketing educator in New York State.

The survey may be accessed at the following link:
